MRS. ISENBERG HAD FEAR OF DISASTER

Examiner Gives Details of Why She Left Liner Korea

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 27.—Mrs. Alexander Isenberg, president of the board of directors of the California Women's Hospital in this city, surrendered the $500 she had paid for passage on the steamship Korea and insisted on being landed from the liner after it had sailed because of a premonition that illness or disaster might overtake her on the voyage.

Whether it was fear of the dense fog bank that drove the Korea back to an anchorage off Meigs wharf Wednesday after it had reached the heads on its outward voyage that impelled Mrs. Isenberg to change her mind, or whether it was merely the characteristic sudden shift of intuition of a woman does not appear, but the fact remains that there was a busy hour for the officers of the liner until Mrs. Isenberg finally prevailed upon Captain Sandberg to call a launch and put her and her party ashore.

Is Captain Her Fears. Mrs. Isenberg, who is the widow of a millionaire sugar planter and former German Consul at Honolulu and a member of the firm of Hackman & Co., boarded the Korea Wednesday, apparently prepared for a happy trip to the islands. She was accompanied by her two children and her sister, Miss Elsa Dulsenberg.

The Korea sailed, and proceeding slowly passed the bay front, through the Golden Gate, and then suddenly plunged into a heavy bank of fog which gave no sign of lifting. Captain Sandberg, following the rule of the steamship company, put back and dropped anchor in the stream.

Of course, there was talk among the passengers of the Rio de Janeiro disaster, and, of course, there was some speculation as to what might have happened to the Korea if she had been run into the sea of fog. Mrs. Isenberg's nervousness increased, and finally she went to Captain Sandberg and to him confided her fears.

Wishes on Leaving Ship. "To win the name of heaven or earth anything terrible could happen to his big ship, with its powerful engines, was more than the captain could imagine, and he told Mrs. Isenberg so.

"It's nothing but this thick fog that bothers us just now," he said, "and as soon as it lifts a little we'll pull out, and it's a hundred to one that we'll strike fair weather outside. As for getting into trouble, my dear madam, that's really out of the question. What makes you think we are to have any terrible experience?"

"I am simply of the belief," Mrs. Isenberg is reported to have said, "that the Korea may meet with the fate of the Rio de Janeiro and be wrecked, and I insist upon being sent ashore right now, before this steamer goes a foot farther.

"I insist upon it, Captain Sandberg. I must be taken off this steamship, with my two children and my sister. Do not dare take us to sea. I insist upon leaving the Korea as soon as possible at any cost."

Relinquishes the $500.

Captain Sandberg argued and explained, but he lost ground at every turn. He ascended the bridge and came down again, and argued some more, and played for position, but Mrs. Isenberg was immovable. He tried suavity and scratched his head when he observed how little effect it had on this inflexible woman. Then he tried to be severe, did Captain Sandberg; but it might as well have been a flunky trying severity on the captain himself, for it didn't go. This woman passenger had to be put ashore or there would be something doing for Captain Sandberg, and perhaps the whole Pacific Mail Company.

Mrs. Isenberg had paid something in the neighborhood of $500 for the passage of herself and party to Honolulu, and she had a lot of baggage aboard, and she had sent her automobile down by a previous steamer; but this cut no figure. Her mind was made up.

Sandberg Surrenders.

Captain Sandberg was informed of his duty and was dared to do anything else. Perhaps if he were an unmarried man he might have dared, but it was only a few months ago that he became a benedict, as it happens, and he had given in, capitulate, surrender and be run by a woman, when only a while ago he had made the remark that he would like to see the woman that could boss him.

It came hard, though, and the square jawed mariner only made up his mind after he had ascended the bridge and come down again, and gone up again and come down again and talked sharply to some of the officers, and kicked around generally. Then he caused the man on the bridge to blow the big whistle for a launch. The Korea was at that time lying at anchor in the fog off Black Point.

It was away along in the night that the signal for a launch was sounded, and in due time, when most of the Korea's passengers were asleep in their bunks, and people ashore were in their beds, a launch hove alongside the Korea's lofty side.

The gangway was lowered and Mrs. Isenberg and her two sons and Miss Dulsenberg were taken down to the small boat. Then came the baggage a lot of it, which a gang of Chinese sailors had dug out of the ship's hold, after a lot of hustling and "Wassa mallas," and Chinese words not learned at the missions. So Mrs. Isenberg had her way, which she started out to have, and that's all there was to it. A brief wireless from the Korea stated that illness had caused Mrs. Isenberg to abandon the liner at the last moment.

Ship Has Safe Voyage.

As for the notion that the Korea or its passenger would meet with disaster, the fates must have changed the order of things if they had anything terrible in store for the great ship, for she reached Honolulu safely yesterday after a quick run from the coast.

Only Exercised Privilege.

"I only exercised a woman's privilege in changing my mind when I sent for the launch," said Mrs. Isenberg yesterday. "I thought that I might be ill on the voyage, and that was my chief reason for not sailing.

"I had some personal business to attend to in Honolulu, and booked passage for my children, my sister and myself. When we got out within a short distance of the heads the captain decided that it was too foggy to attempt the passage that date. The children were restless and I myself was not feeling well, the result of four months' suffering from nervous prostration. So I decided to return to San Francisco.

"I paid $500 for our reservations, but I have not asked the company to return the amount. I am willing to sacrifice that, as I feel the voyage would never have improved my children's health or my own."

ON EXHIBITION; NOT FOR SALE.

Photographic studies of Hawaiian types made by Mrs. Gurrey and similar to those which were sent to the Alaska-Yukon-Pacific exposition, will soon be placed on exhibition, but will not be for sale.

Thanksgiving Day, in America, was a day first set apart by the Plymouth Pilgrims, in 1621, in acknowledgment of their first harvest in America, and perpetuated in many States by an annual festival appointed by the Governor. Its national celebration in recognition of the year's blessings was first recommended by proclamation of President Lincoln in 1863, and has since been annually observed. It usually falls on the last Thursday in November.

This Thanksgiving season we are pleased to offer the following rare assortment of delicacies.

Mince-meat, Plum Pudding, Fruit Cakes, Brandied Fruits, Sweet-pickled Fruits, Fancy Preserves and Jellies, Maraschino Cherries, Marrons in Brandy and Syrup, Sweet Cider, Boiled Cider, Cranberry Sauce, Fancy Table Raisins, Citron, Lemon and Orange Peel, Olives, (All Varieties, Stuffed and Plain), Pickles, Assorted Nuts, Lehnhardt's Candies, Frozen Eastern and Cocktail Oysters, Cheese (all Varieties), Bon Bon Crackers, (For Table Decoration), Fresh Fruits and Vegetables in Season.
